

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF GERMAN INVASION

London Correspondent Tells of Reckless Sacrifice of Life by Kaiser's Commanders.

NUMBERS NEVER DIMINISH

Their Advance Is Declared to Be Not Strategy, Nor Individual Qualities, but Efficiency of the Whole Military System.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] LONDON, September 5.—The correspondent of the Standard sends from Boulogne a graphic description of the German invasion of France, in which he summarizes the accounts of the reckless sacrifice of life by the Kaiser's commanders in assaults in mass formation, he says.

"The Germans achieved wonderful results by these methods of fighting.
They fight almost automatically, and advance with a machine-like precision, so thorough in their training that it is not strategy, not skill in the handling of weapons, nor individual qualities that have achieved the advance on Paris, but efficiency of the whole military system."

The correspondent likens the advance to an endless swarm of ants, which apparently nothing can stop, and while numbers apparently never diminish, no matter how many are killed, the narrative continues:

"After the occupation of Brussels, I was in a French village through which the Germans were passing. The French, in retreating, had torn up the railways, and while the German engineers were repairing them the troops marched along the field ditches, carrying their impedimenta with them."

"The hum of a Taube aeroplane's motor signaled their approach. Soon a host of the flying machines were sighted, and all evidently were spying out the land."

"While we watched, one machine crumpled up and fell to the ground.
It had occupants pitched out in mid-air and dropped 500 feet to their death.
But how utterly insignificant was this tragic incident!"

"Two German airmen dead and two German families lying in mourning—but the German hosts marched on, and the destruction of these two airmen of a mighty whole was of no military consequence."

FIRST IN VANGUARD
OF MILITARY CYCLISTS

"First round the bend of the road came the vanguard of military cyclists.
Close behind came a regiment of cavalry, then the field artillery, with the horses almost worn out, the drivers thrashing them to keep the pace of the forced march. Then more cavalry, and corps of various descriptions, and at last the infantry. They marched eight abreast, and there seemed no end to them. They marched at a rate of more than four miles an hour, which, considering the weight of their equipment, was taxing their strength to the utmost."

"When thousands had gone by, more thousands approached, and continued the march to the front, and when these thousands had disappeared, more tens of thousands arrived from the rear and went on marching."

"In a spectacular engagement between German and French troops, which I had the opportunity of watching, I saw sixty-seven figures dropping like nine-pins before the French artillery, but more gray-green figures emerged from the rear, and the advance continued. The Germans went forward at double quick, and the French artillery continued its destruction, but the onward rush was too rapid for any such means to stop them. As the foremost were shot down, the men of the second line were in position to push forward.
As these fell, the Germans of the third line were exactly behind, and took its place. The slaughter was terrible, but the advanced line after line, in close formation from right to left, and from left to right. The French simply could not shoot them dead with sufficient rapidity to stem the onslaught. The Germans succeeded in advancing, and the French withdrew to avoid being completely overwhelmed."

RHEIMS IS TAKEN
WITHOUT FIGHTING

LONDON, September 5 (9:55 P. M.).
An official statement issued in Berlin and received here by Marconi wireless, says:

"Reports from war correspondents of Viennese newspapers state that the whole situation in the northern theatre of war has been changed for the better by the victory of the armies commanded by General Auffenberg and General Dank."

"As an example of the brilliant work of the armies in the field the correspondents relate the Russian infantry who tried to beat a hasty retreat under cover were stopped by the renewed direct fire the moment they attempted to make any movement. Later the bodies of a large number of soldiers who had been killed by shrapnel were discovered near this place. Officers of Soutar detachment on their arrival in Vienna were received by Emperor Francis Joseph, and afterward entertained at a banquet by the Minister of War."

"Rheims has been taken without fighting. Owing to the rapid advance of our army, little attention can be paid to booty and guns, and wagons have

Corns Quit, Pains Stop, With "Gets-It"

Quit Plasters, Salves and What-Not.

After using "GETS-IT" once you will never again have occasion for asking:
"What can I do to get rid of my corn?"
"GETS-IT" is the first cure, certain cure—under every known.

Why "Suffer."
With
Corns? Use
"GETS-IT."
They'll Vanish!

If you have tried other things by the score and will now try "GETS-IT" you will realize this glorious fact:

You probably are tired of sticking on tape that won't stay stuck, plasters that shift themselves right onto your corn, contraptions that make a bundle of your toe and press right down on the corn. Put two drops of "GETS-IT" on that corn in two seconds. The corn is then dissolved as sure as night follows day. The corn shrivels. There's no pain, no fuss. If you think this sounds too good to be true, try it on any corn, callus, wart or bunion.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by J. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.—Advertisement.

in your medicine chest, you can be confident that you have a stimulant at hand that answers all requirements.
Its absolute purity and uniformity has earned the praise of many physicians who never hesitate to prescribe it when a tonic stimulant is necessary. Always be sure to get Duffy's—its name is on the label and on the bottle.
